DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1-5, 8 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Chung ('073).

Chung ('073) discloses a lathe tool of the single piece type for boring with a cross-section less than 10 mm, comprising a substantially cylindrical tool body (22) provided to be engaged and held in a tool support (11) traversed by at least one lubricant supply channel, this tool body being prolonged, at one end, by a neck terminating in a head comprising a cutting edge and constituting the active portion of the tool, characterized by the fact that the neck is eccentric relative to the axis of the tool body, whilst the head , at the end of this neck , being itself eccentric relative to this axis, said head , with its cutting edge , being inscribed in and substantially tangent to a periphery of a cylindrical space (20) corresponding to the prolongation of said tool body ; further the head (5) is located back at least a hundredth of a millimeter from the periphery of the cylindrical space ; and further comprising at one forward end a recess suitable for the reception of the body of the lathe tool , as well as gripping means (14) for holding this latter in said recess, this tool support being also traversed by at least one lubricant supply channel (44), characterized by the fact that said channel opens at the forward end of the tool support. Chung further discloses a lubricant supply means (42) Chung ('073) lacks the disclosure of the specific dimensions claimed.

It would have been an obvious matter of design choice to use the claimed dimensions, since such a modification would have involved a mere change in the size of a component. A change in size is generally recognized as being within the level of ordinary skill in the art. In re Rose, 105 USPQ 237 (CCPA 1955). It appears that there would be no new or unexpected result from such a modification.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 6,7,10 and 11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
